

Our Cockshutt Family History ^ Joshua Cockshutt – the last of our Cotton Spinners

I remember in the late nineteen 50's my Uncle Edmund Cockshutt telling me that the Cockshutt family had always been in textiles. He had been involved in the silk industry in Macclesfield and he said that his grandfather had owned a cotton mill. In this family history, the facts and some interpretations of the facts are included to tell the story of how the Cockshutts had finally ended the family's long association with the weaving industries of North East Lancashire.

Uncle Edmund's father's father was Joshua Cockshutt, who was born on 2 January 1840 in Colne, Lancashire (PRO Reference: Vol. XX1, Page 605) to Edmund Cockshutt and Elizabeth (known as "Betty") Cockshutt nee Ashton. No record could be located of a religious baptism service. A year later, Joshua's family is recorded in the 1841 Census at 49 Saul Street, Preston as follows:

- Edmund Cockshott (sic), aged 30, Journeyman Mechanic, born in Lancashire.
- Betty Cockshott, aged 30, born in Lancashire.
- Mary Cockshott, aged 7, born in Lancashire.
- Elizabeth Cockshott, aged 3, born in Lancashire.
- Joshua Cockshott, aged 1, born in Lancashire.
- James Ashton, aged 70, Independent, born in Lancashire.
- Betty Ashton, aged 65, born in Lancashire.

In the 1851 Census, the family is made up of the same persons residing at the same address, however Joshua's father, Edmund Cockshut (sic) is recorded as "Iron Founder Employing Master, employing 8 men and 3 boys." Joshua's Grandmother, Betty Ashton, is no longer listed and her father, James Ashton is listed as a "Widower". Winifred Ashton, Joshua's Great Aunt, aged 85 is listed as a resident.

Today Saul Street is predominately made up of modern business premises and number 49 Saul Street no longer exists, however it must once have been a relatively good address, close to the main street of Preston and the Cockshutt's neighbours were predominantly trades and small business people.

In 1861, Joshua Cockshutt, aged 21, married Margaret Mary Hayes (born 1842 in Preston) at Preston in the March quarter (PRO Reference: Vol 8e, page 679). No record can be located of a religious wedding service.

Tragedy struck Joshua Cockshutt's family on 14 December 1867 when their new born baby son Joshua Cockshutt, aged just 14 weeks, died. The death was reported in the Preston Chronical with a simple Death Notice stating "On the 8th instant, Joshua, son of Mr. Joshua Cockshutt, East View, aged 14 weeks."

In 1871, the Census records Joshua Cockshutt and family residents of 33 East View, Preston. Those resident are Joshua and his wife Margaret, Edmund aged 9, Nicholas aged 7, Joshua, aged 1 and Mary Cockshutt (?) who is listed as a General Servant, born in Ireland.

The East View address appears to have been a more sought after location with the Cockshutt's neighbours now including an "Actuary Savings Bank" and a "Property Owner".

33 East View, Preston today

By the 1881 Census, Joshua Cockshutt's business and family appear to have prospered. Joshua Cockshutt, now aged 41, is recorded as a Cotton Spinner (employing about 100 hands) resident with his wife Margaret, sons Edmund, aged 19, and Joseph, aged 6, daughters Mary, aged 4 and Margaret aged 5 months, and two servants at 17-18 Bairstow Street Preston.

The move to Bairstow Street marked a move up the social ladder for the Cockshutts. Next door at number 16 Bairstow Street there was a Dr. James N Nicol, listed in the Census documents as "General Practice. LRCS" and on the other side, Rev. Alfred B Bevan recorded as "Head Master Grammar School".

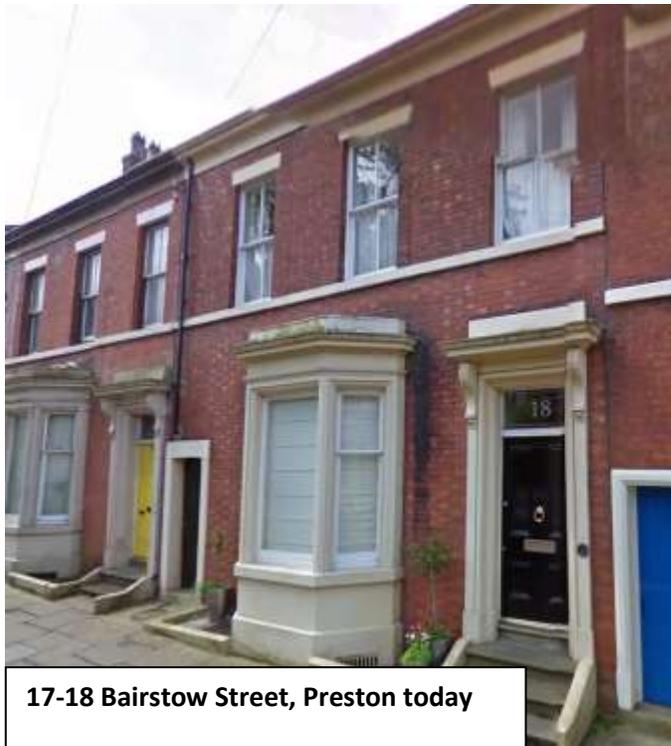

Joshua, now aged 41, was recorded as a "Cotton Spinner (employing about 100 hands)". It seems that Joshua's business interests had evolved from "Machine Maker" in 1861 (presumably in his father, Edmund Cockshutt's, Iron Foundry).

The 1891 Census documents can perhaps tell us a little about the business affairs of the family since on Census night, Sunday, 5 April 1891, Joshua, his wife Margaret and their 19 years old daughter Ellen (sic) [probably refers to Helen, b.1872] were on holiday in Blackpool. Several aspects of the document are of interest. First, to note that the Census return shows the Cockshutts were resident at a guest house just off the Blackpool Promenade at No.6 Chrystal Terrace on Census night. This was probably then, as now, a Guest House on a street off the Promenade rather than a hotel on the Promenade, suggesting that they chose the more modest accommodation for their holiday. Second, that Joshua's occupation was again recorded as "Cotton Spinner", indicating perhaps that Joshua continued to be actively involved in the cotton industry in 1891.

In 1901, Joshua Cockshutt, wife Margaret, his three daughters still living at home, Helen, aged 29, Elizabeth, aged 28 and Mary, aged 24 both School Teachers and youngest son, James, aged 18, were living at No.1 West Cliff Terrace, Preston with two servants and their Granddaughter Alice Margaret Cockshutt, aged just 4. Joshua is described as a "Yarn Merchant" on "Own Account".

It will be noted that Alice Cockshutt, who was later to become Alice Flack, was recorded on Census night, Sunday 31 March 1901, as staying with her grandparents.

The 1911 Census reveals Joshua Cockshutt, now aged 71, Widower, "Yarn (Cotton) Agent" as resident with daughters Helen, aged 39, and Agnes, aged 25, both single, and a Servant at 3 Averham Colonade, Preston.

No.3 Averham Colonade, Preston is likely to have been seen as a prestigious address in 1911. The choice of this place of residence probably indicates that Joshua no longer required as large a home. Just when he moved to this address is unknown but perhaps the move following the death of his wife Margaret, aged 68, in the June quarter of 1909 (PRO Reference Vol. 8e, Page 383).

3 Averham Colonade, Preston today

Joshua Cockshutt's death was recorded in the Liverpool Daily of the 31 July as follows:

DEATHS.

BALL.— July 28, at 86, Ramilies-road, Wavertree. Edward Arthur, the dearly-beloved husband of Margaret (Moll) Ball. Service at Mossley Hill Church, to-morrow (Tuesday), at 2.15 p.m.; interment at Allerton Cemetery at 5 p.m. (Friends please accept this—the only—intimation.)

BAYLY.— July 12, at 558, St. Joseph-street, Lachine, Montreal, Canada, aged 54 years, after 18 months' illness, Edward James Bayly, the dear husband of Emma Bayly, and only son of the late Rev. H. R. Bayly, of Mountjoy-square, Dublin, and Ballancarry, Co. Limerick. (Irish papers please copy.)

COCKSHUTT.— At his residence, The Colonade, Preston, in his 76th year, Joshua Cockshutt. (Fortified with the rites of Holy Church.) R.I.P. Interred at Preston on Saturday.

A search of the available records for significant events in the lives of the Joshua Cockshutt, and his son Edmund (Alice's father) is made more complex by several factors as follows:

First, Joshua Cockshutt, born 2 January 1840 in Preston and died 12 July 1916 at Preston had two other close relatives by the same name who both lived during at least part of the same period. There were:

- Joshua Cockshutt (born 1814 in Colne, Lancashire), who was the younger son of Edmund Cockshutt "The Younger" of Ball Gove, Colne, and our Joshua's Great Uncle.
- Joshua Cockshutt (born 1785 in Colne, Lancashire), younger son of Edmund Cockshutt of Ball Grove, Colne, and our Joshua Cockshutt's, great great uncle.

Second, the Joshua Cockshutt who was our Joshua's great great uncle, lived into his 70's and was active in the Cotton industry in Lancashire at much the same time as Joshua began describing himself in the Census documents as a "Cotton Spinner".

Third, many of the contemporary sources do not provide any identifying particulars that would allow differentiation between the three Joshua Cockshutts.

These difficulties, make it possible that at least some of the following findings refer to our Joshua Cockshutt and help explain his business career:

From The Preston Chronical and Lancashire Advertiser, 11 October 1845.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED IN LANCASHIRE.
Edmund Cockshutt and William Lowe, Preston, Lancashire, iron founders.
T. Pierrepont and J. Marsden, Liverpool, watch jewellers—T. Stokes and Son, Staleybridge, joiners—W. B. Lamb, and W. R. Miller, Rochdale, surgeons—H. Wilson and R. W. Synn, Higher-hill, Ashton-under-Lyne, brick makers.

From this notice it seems likely that Joshua's father, Edmund Cockshutt (born 1809 in Colne), who had moved from Colne to live with his new wife in Preston in about 1833, had been in an Iron Foundry business partnership from at least the time of Joshua's birth in 1840. Since our Joshua's father was recorded as being a "Journeyman Mechanic" in the 1841 Census and an "Iron Foundry Master" in the 1851 Census, it seems reasonable to suggest that Joshua had spent all of his early working life in the Iron Foundry business.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Partnership heretofore subsisting between us, as Iron and Brass Founders and Machine Makers, carried on at the Bridge-street Foundry, in Preston, in the county of Lancaster, under the firm of Cockshutt and Goodier, is this day dissolved by mutual consent; and by the like consent all debts due from or to our late firm will be paid and received by the undersigned Edmund Cockshutt, who in future will carry on the said business upon his sole credit and account.—Dated this 6th day of June 1845.

Edmund Cockshutt, Thomas Goodier.

It also seems reasonable to suggest that the Iron Foundry business may have been originally set up in the early 1800s to supply the cotton mills in Colne owned by Edmund’s family. Joshua’s Great Uncle Joshua (born 1785) appears to have managed the sale of many of the properties and business left to Edmund Cockshutt, The Younger by Edmund Cockshutt of Ball Grove (Colne) in his Will. The following references provide some insight into the extent of the Cockshutt business interests:

The following newspaper clippings suggest that the financial affairs of the Cockshutt families descended from Edmund Cockshutt of Ball Grove were strongly associated with the Cotton industry and that there were both good times and bad. It appears that after several generations being involved in the Cotton industry, first as Mill owners, then as manufacturers and then as engineers supplying the industry, Joshua Cockshutt, our Great Uncle Edmund’s father, was the last of the “Cotton Spinners” in the family.

WALTON FACTORY

| Print

ALTERNATIVE NAME: WHITE FACTORY, PENWORTHAM FACTORY

Cotton Spinning mill established by John Watson as a water-powered mill on the River Lostock sometime prior to 1791; John Watson insured a new carding and spinning room at Walton-le-Dale in 1796. By 1807 John Watson was forced to close the mill due to bankruptcy. The mill was advertised to let with 15,000 spindles during the following year. Cooper and Sherrington occupied the mill briefly before it was up for let again in May 1811, together with full machinery which was ready for immediate use.

In 1825 the mill was being run by Thomas German & Co, which later became known as German & Petty. The mill was advertised for let in 1833, and was described as being powered by a steam engine of 36hp, all the machinery required for cotton spinning, a gas house, apparatus, and 51 cottages. In addition, the factory was supplied by an inexhaustible supply of water from a reservoir of eight acres.

The mill is recorded as the Walton Factory (Cotton) on the Ordnance Survey first edition 1:10,560 map of 1848. Sometime around 1860 Edmund Cockshutt occupied the mill, during this time an engine house with boiler and chimney were added, and later still, the present outbuildings were erected to cope with the increased trade.

By 1891, the factory contained 25,000 spindles, and produced 40s/60s twist and weft, and was occupied by Joshua Cockshutt. By 1910 the mill had changed hands to Vernon & Co Ltd, Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers of surgical dressings. Vernon & Co enlarged the complex during 1920, and the mill now occupies 2.28 acres.

The mill buildings are extant, but at the time of the survey visit, in 2008-10, they were derelict. The surviving buildings appear to be largely of late nineteenth or twentieth century date.

THE COTTON TRADE OF PRESTON.—Affairs in the cotton trade are gradually assuming a more serious aspect, and it cannot be disguised that the prospect for the coming winter is gloomier than this time last year. With reference to the dispute at Messrs. Hollins' Mill, the difficulty has not yet been arranged. On Wednesday morning the mill was thrown open to give the weavers who had struck against the further reduction of 10 per cent. a chance of resuming work. Most of the operatives presented themselves, but they refused to recommence work on the masters' terms; and after some parleying with the manager and one of the employers they left the mill again, both parties being resolute, and no offer even of compromise having been made on either side, and a notice was then posted at the gates that the mill would be closed until further notice. The Preston Cotton Spinning and Manufacturing Company, whose mill contains 45,000 spindles and 750 looms, have begun to run short time, though hitherto they have kept their machinery in full operation. At Messrs. Shaw's weaving shed, off Lancaster-road, containing between 400 and 500 looms, some of the hands have been compelled to retire this week, and the remainder will finish during the course of a few days, when the mill will be closed for an indefinite period. We have it on reliable authority that unless trade quickly revives, the largest mill of a large firm will shortly be closed altogether, and other firms will, it is feared, be forced to come to a similar standstill. Penwortham (Cockshutt's) and Farington (Bashall's) mills have either been stopped or are only running short time. The notice for a further reduction in wages at Messrs. Horrockses, Miller, and Co.'s mills expires during the course of next week.
